EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Prescott Miner has resumed the primeval condition of its former rectitude, now that the Indian scare is over. It says: "Our people may pursue their usual avocation in peace and without fear." If their usual avocation is "avocation," what a set of busy-bodies Prescott must be blessed with.

The Tombstone Epitaph has been reinforced with the brains of Hon. Pat. Hamilton. He and Purdy are spoken of as a strong democratic team, but we want to know which is the near and which is the off animal. It may save trouble in the future to have that delicate point settled. Perhaps, however, they only constitute a pack train of two animals, in which case the only thing to be determined is which one will carry the whisky.

We had hoped that when the sentence of death was pronounced upon Guitau we should not hear anything more from the outfit, except in an obituary way. It appears, however, that the rest of the family are developing a love of notoriety, and are succeeding admirably in keeping their names before the telegraphic news reporters. Their latest move seems to be of the nature of an endeavor to convince the public that the rest of the family now living are tainted with insanity. The proper way to find out the truth of the matter will be to examine the assassin's brain after the coming neck-tie picnic.

Some time ago we delivered a sermon in a law office building upon the "penalty of our own sins." In that, by the way, we alluded to the case of a certain individual, Arthur, who had been removed from the jurisdiction of New York, through Blaine's influence, was elevated to the head of the government. We have another example of the queer workings of time in the appointment of Mr. Chandler to the head of the Navy Department. The story comes from Washington that Mrs. Chandler was the Miss Hale, whose picture was found upon the person of Booth, the murderer of President Lincoln. Although nothing was known as to the relations between Booth and Miss Hale, the finding of the picture formed the basis of a good many romances. "The same whirling of time which has brought this about has also made the then young son of the martyred Lincoln Secretary of War. It now appears that, according to official etiquette, it is the duty of the Secretary of War to escort the wife of his next in rank to dinner on state occasions. He must take the wife of the Secretary of the Navy. Secretary Lincoln, in short, must escort the one-time sweetheart of the assassin of his distinguished father.

Extravagant statements continue to be made, by those who have not studied the question, that every dollar of gold or silver taken from the mines, has cost nine or ten dollars, while act and figures readily show that the mining industry, even in its crude incipency, has paid a better profit for time and money expended than many other well established enterprises. It might be well to ask the source of all our currency and the mineral wealth of the world. Where did the money come from which was used to produce the gold and silver now in existence, if it cost ten dollars to produce one? The absurdity of such statements is readily apparent.

Story of a Monument.

She was a handsome and wealthy widow, and had but just lost her husband. Full of grief over the loss of her husband, she sought a dealer in monuments, friend of the dear departed.

Seeing the sympathetic face of her husband's friend, the tears burst afresh from her eyes, as she greeted him, sobbing, "You have heard it, George is gone."

Yes, he had heard it.
"And now," said she, "I want to get a monument, the finest and most imposing monument that you can make. I don't care for the expense. You have them costing ten thousand dollars, do you not?" she ventured.

Oh, yes, he could build her a splendid monument for that. He would prepare a design and submit it to her.

"You will have it ready soon, will you not?" she pleaded. "This evening?"

"No, not this evening," he replied, but he would hurry it up as fast as possible and bring it to her residence. And so it was settled, and she went away, very grateful for the sympathy, and anxiously expectant for the design.

Then the monument man got out his old design and had it transferred to a clean piece of paper, and in fifteen minutes was ready for the widow, but of course it would not do to show up for a week or so. The long days dragged out their weary length daily, and the marble man assumed an appropriately funeral countenance, sought out the widow, and submitted his work. He found her somewhat more reconciled to her loss, and a little inclined to be critical, but on the whole she was pleased with the design.

"But," she said, "I have been talking over the matter with my sister, and she thinks five thousand dollars ought to buy a very nice monument. Couldn't you make one like that for five thousand?"

"No," he responded, "but I can build a monument that will cost you five thousand dollars, and I will make a design for it."

"Yes, I will, your wealth, please, and I will come to your office and examine it this week or next."

"Oh, no," I would trouble you to do so. There is no particular hurry about it, and I will call upon you; it's my turn, you know," and she smiled graciously upon him as she bowed him out.

Well, what was a poor monument man to do? He could only wait, buying himself meanwhile in getting up elaborate and really beautiful designs. One day he met the lady on the street, dressed in the merest apology or half mourning. He bowed obsequiously, and informed her that the design was finished, and that he thought it could not fail to be perfectly satisfactory.

"Oh," she said, "I have been so busy, don't you know, with one thing and another, that I have forgotten all about it. Let me see, how much was that to cost?"

"Five thousand dollars."

"Oh, dear, I really can't afford to pay that much. Now couldn't you," this very bewitchingly, "make a real nice monument for five about hundred dollars? I know you can; and I will come around and see you soon. Good-bye."

Then the monument man went to his office and told his grief to a three-legged lamb and a stone angel.

Some time after this, the charming widow with a male friend, whom she called "Charley," dropped in again.

"Do you know," she said, "I feel so ashamed that I never came around to look at your pretty designs. Charley and I have concluded that those great costly ornaments are so foolish, after one's death, you know. We think it's wicked, don't we, Charley?"

Charley allowed that it was.

"But," she continued, "those little white beads, such as they put up at the soldiers' graves, Charley and I think are very nice. So neat and unpretentious. Couldn't you make one of them for me and put George's monogram on it? His initials make such a very pretty monogram."

The monument man's cup was full, and he spilled over on them. He told her that Charley could get an old shingle and tack one of George's business cards on it.

The Wrong Fur.

A very excited colored brother hunted up an officer patrolling High street yesterday and said that he had long borne the wrong fur, and that he was about to break the law, but the officer said, "I won't crush that law."

"I won't fight," he replied, "I won't."

"I can't help it, can't help it, no."

"If the pussan makes his disappearance on the street while I'm around,

he'll get me and I'll die for it."

He glared at me and lied about me, and

he'll get me and I'll die for it."

The officer based on to the end of his beat and returned to find the crusher with his back to the fence and a woman leading him a wet rag to tie his head up with.

"Let's see? You are the man who was going to crush some one?" observed the officer.

"I speak I see."

"Did he come out?"

"I speak he did."

"Did he die?"

"No, he didn't, but he trouble was it was a long time. De onery scoundrel refused to be crushed."

"That's all?"

"Yes, he come to get healed up and he'll be in-law. Four on some of the men, far dis die head believe me."

EASTERN SENTIMENTALITY on the Chinese question is of the same kind as Eastern sentimentality on the Indian question. It will do very well for people who never had anything to do with the barbarians of either race, but it is the sheerest kind of nonsense when applied to actual surroundings as we have them in the West. If there is any good in either we have been unable to find it out, but we rather like the idea of a Chinese colony and an Indian reservation in Massachusetts and other Eastern States.

Rescued from Death.

The following statement of William J. Coughlin, Somerville, Mass., is so remarkable that we need to ask for the attention of our readers. "In the fall of 1876 I was taken with a violent BLEEDING OF THE LUNGS followed by a severe cough. I soon began to lose my appetite and flesh. I was so weak at one time that I could not leave my bed. In the summer of 1877 I was admitted to the City Hospital. While there the doctors said I had a hole in my left lung as big as a half dollar. I expended over a hundred dollars in doctors and medicines. I was so far gone at one time a report went around that I was dead. I gave up hope, but a friend told me of DR. WM. BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I laughed at my friends, thinking that my case was incurable, but I got a bottle to satisfy them, when to my surprise and gratification, I commenced to feel better. My hope, once dead, began to revive, and to-day I feel in better spirits than I have the past three years. "I write this hoping you will publish it so that every one afflicted with Diseased Lungs will be induced to take DR. WM. BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS. I am convinced that CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED. I have taken two bottles and can positively say that it has done more good than all the other medicines I have taken since my sickness. My cough has almost entirely disappeared and I shall soon be able to go to work." Sold by druggists.

The Yuma Sentinel offers some very strong arguments why Congress should make an appropriation for the improvement of the Colorado river. The Star heartily endorses them. But there is reasonable ground to fear that if the Republican press continues the effort to force upon Congress the impression that this Territory is overrun by organized outlaws, it will not perceive the necessity of giving us any large appropriations. All new countries need all of the federal assistance they can get, and to obtain it they seek to show that they are capable of utilizing the help afforded them. The Republic press of this Territory, however, appears to hold opinions exactly the reverse of this.—Star.
